Volume 2, Issue 13

Good day to you all!

Jody told me to write again, so here we go!

Each spring becomes my most favorite time of the year. We are finally having a rainy, cool, and colorful period of spring weather. Each load of wood I bring in must be my last, but it sure takes the damp out during the evening. My first random thought was Sara's fish and her sticker book. We are pecking at cleaning up the collections of life and distributing or throwing away what has become unimportant. I catch myself sitting down and reading, or touching and rebooting a memory of where I was, what was I like then, where did the time go, with the multiple treasures found way down in the storage box. I found Dr Sara's sticker book. I could see her concentrating and excitedly picking her favorites and placing "chust so". In the corner of a page she expressed her concern about tooth decay! Go figure.

Do you all have a scrapbook? Photographs? Stories to tell? I invite you to visit them. I found it gives a perspective of where I am now (besides getting older), what is really important, and clues of what we have become or will become. The spices of warmth, tears and embrace, flow with those stories told by all, corrected by the elders and the history of the past lived at the table.

Don't forget to feed my fish! We all hear that when Dr Sara leaves for education or a rest. The three gold amigos reside in the tank where we visit upon your first exposure to us. We use flakes for daily and a chunky thing for long term nutrition. It is kinda like how life comes at us with lessons or a recipe with spices layered into it instead of all at once. Feeding is an all-important life skill. Consistent, timely, and quality ingestion of both food and life lessons are imperative to fruitful living. Too many of us do not eat properly. Breakfast, lunch and dinner are critical. Life lessons, learned, are critical. We can sometimes feed on the surface with the flakes of input, other times we must wait for something to dissolve or break apart to be seen and valued. The fish are contained in that rectangle of water. Do they feel the walls or see thru them? I invite you all to "swim outside the box ". Place stickers in your albums. Look at your photos. Learn, Live and swim free.

Warmly, John

Does Google Rule the World? By Dr Sara

How in a small little area like Lancaster County with a small little office like ours can Google be so influential in helping us stay who we are? A lot of us have had discussions about how the world of medicine and dentistry is changing; right here in Lancaster County so many small dental practices (like us) are being bought out by large corporations that are strictly about business capital, not dental health. We are exactly the opposite, dental health and personal relationships mean the world to us and we will stay that way. How can we continue to ensure this? This is where Google comes in. We do not advertise or market in a large way, we see most of our new faces because of word of mouth or because someone "googles" "dentists in Lititz", sees our smiling faces and then picks us to be their dental home. Our Google "presence" is defined by the activity on our website and by Google reviews. If you believe in us and our values, like we believe in us and our values, then please take the time to write us a Google review! It would mean the "world" to us!

CONFIRMING APPOINTMENTS by Tia

It's been 8 months now since we started using our new system for confirming appointments and sending out other mailers to you, including our bi-yearly newsletter. We feel the new system is working well, but as always would love to hear your feedback, anytime. We have had a few of you call and tell us that you have received a text from us and that if you respond it will charge you. We want to let you know that the charge is NOT coming from our office; the charge would be coming from your cellular provider. If you get this message please call here and we will take you off of the texting for appointment reminders and if you have an email address we will be sure to get that from you and then the system will confirm your appointment that way. For those of you who take an antibiotic prior to your dental treatment, Jody & I will still be calling you the day before to remind you to take your premedication. We wouldn't want you to forget that important piece of the puzzle for your appointment.

CAVITIES by Melissa and Katie

The subject of "cavities" is not often a topic of conversation...until you have one and are sitting in the dentist's office! Here are the top five myths concerning cavities that will assist you in caring for your teeth.

1. CAVITIES ARE OBVIOUS WHEN YOU HAVE THEM.

Cavities are NOT obvious. There is not always pain or sensitivity associated with a cavity. Once a tooth is causing pain because of a cavity, it often means the tooth has decayed so much that it has affected the nerve(s). If a patient waits until there is discomfort, the tooth is often severely damaged.

2. DON'T WORRY ABOUT BABY TEETH GETTING CAVITIES. THEY FALL OUT ANYWAY.

Here's what we know. All of those baby teeth serve a very important purpose because they help the jaw maintain spaces for our permanent teeth. Bacteria can also collect in those empty spaces. It can lead to abscesses and pain.

3. ADULTS GET CAVITIES LESS OFTEN THAN KIDS DO.

Because children are now having sealant applied to their teeth and because they are, for the most part, drinking fluoridated water this is no longer true. Senior citizens now have a higher risk of cavities because of some medications. A side effect of some medicines is to cause a condition known as "dry mouth". When there is not sufficient saliva in the mouth teeth do not have as much protection against acids and bacteria. Food substances are more likely to stick to teeth.

4. IF YOU HAVE A TOOTHACHE, PLACE AN ASPIRIN NEXT TO THE TOOTH THAT IS HURTING.

PLEASE DO NOT DO THIS! Applying an aspirin directly on the gum or tooth can actually worsen the situation. Aspirin is formulated to be ingested, and that is exactly how aspirin can help diminish pain. Aspirin is extremely acidic. Pressing it against the tooth can eat away at the enamel as well as burn gum tissue. This, too, can lead to abscesses and additional pain.

5. YOU WILL ALWAYS END UP REPLACING EVERY FILLING.

This is not true for every filling. A filling will need to be replaced if a cavity forms around it; it becomes cracked; or if the filling or the tooth itself fractures. There are specific materials called amalgam and composite used in some fillings. If a filling was made using these materials it is more likely it may someday need to be replaced. Other than that, fillings can last a lifetime. Ask us about gold restorations! The perfect restoration for a lifetime!

What is true and important is brushing teeth at least twice a day with a fluoride toothpaste, flossing, and using a good mouthwash. Taking care of your teeth is the best way to keep your smile looking great!

WHAT IS A PANOREX X-RAY? By Char, Jo, Meg, and Ali

A Panorex is much like a panoramic picture; it provides a full view of the entire mouth. The Panorex is one x-ray that provides a picture of all of your teeth and the surrounding bones. It can detect potential problems other x-rays cannot.

A Panorex is an excellent way for your dentist to check for conditions such as:

- Tumors and Cysts
- Gum Disease and Bone Loss
- Tooth and Jaw Development
- Impacted Wisdom Teeth
- Infections
- Fractures
- Orthodontic Evaluations
- Assessments for Implant Placement

Having a Panorex taken is very easy. While wearing a lead apron the patient stands in the center of the Panorex machine. The machine travels around the outside of the patient's head for approximately 20 seconds. The image is then displayed digitally on a computer for the dentist to read. It is normally recommended to have a Panorex every 5 years or whenever necessary for your specific dental situation.
